Isaac I. Stevens

ISAAC INGALLS STEVENS (1818-1862), in whose memory Stevens Memorial Hospital in South Snohomish County is dedicated. Stevens, first Governor of Washington Territory, was born in Massachusetts, first became famous for his work in making treaties with the Indians. He also surveyed a northern route for a transcontinental railway to the Pacific, and served as a territorial delegate to the United States Congress in 1857. Stevens was killed in a Civil War battle at Chantilly, Virginia, on September 1, 1862.

Description of Design Development New STEVENS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

In designing Stevens Memorial Hospital, it was fortunate to have property centrally and ideally located in the rapidly growing area of Edmonds, Lynnwood and Mountlake Terrace. Sloping gradually from 25th Avenue South to the east, this eleven acre area allows ample room for present needs and future expansion, and at the same time, remains free and clear of fringe developments.

A great deal of thought was given to the present and future needs that will be required of this community hospital. Special emphasis was placed on planning the most modern medical, surgical and maternity facility that could be provided for economical and pleasant patient care. Flexibility and effective use of space to provide for an efficient operation has also been of prime concern. The completed plan provides for 116 beds with possible future expansion.

Features of the plan provide for easy access to the site and adequate parking. The administrative wing, separate from the main hospital block, features a pleasant reception area. In entering the first floor area of the hospital, visitor and patient traffic is easily controlled, and this area accommodates dining and food preparation, emergency and surgical suite, central sterile supply and storage, pathology and radiology departments, staff locker rooms and equipment space. The second floor is devoted to patient nursing rooms, with maternity, delivery and nursery facilities at the north end, and the third floor provides space for additional nursing rooms, with pediatrics and intensive care units on the south end.

Nursing units will have adequate and controlled natural lighting and ventilation and will be heated by means of radiant electrical heat in the ceiling. Surgical and delivery suites and nursery are air conditioned, and all other interior areas are mechanically ventilated.

Carefully planned space, cheerful colors and every modern convenience has been incorporated throughout. The completed hospital is the result of endless refinement instigated by constructive criticism from the Hospital Executive Board, the Administrator and his Staff and the many other individuals necessary to develop the complex planning of a hospital.
